ALBUQUERQUE and Bernardo county men met last night in a session which will be historic as setting the first mark of improvement of this community. They started things. But we bore in mind that, though there still are many things to do and that it takes united effort to accomplish a great deal.

It is not our intention to throw cold water on the hopes of those who x-rayed that meeting; we merely wish to point out that now, tomorrow, next week and every day until the plans made at this meeting have become a fact, each Albuquerquian, even in this section, must put his right shoulder to the wheel and onward.

There is no time for anyone to hang back, nor will such a time come. It is up to this community to carry forward its project of drainage forward and as rapidly as may be done. A certain and very definite drainage through the rain of the farmland remaining in tillable condition, naturally which would blast this city forever.

On the other hand, united effort cannot work for the common end, and will produce in this valley a garden spot as has been seen elsewhere and such a city an open Albuquerque dream may one day be a fact.

No dream can be made a distinct and prosperous reality; the reward will be attained; but it takes work to make facts out of fancies. A start has been made, let us continue the effort and the goal has been achieved.

cost expense of space in hundreds of newspapers. Electric fan week is strictly a commercial enterprise, but one feels like helping it along in every possible way, even to the extent of voluntary, free newspaper space because of all the inventions which have come to us with harnessed electricity the most beneficial; second of course to light and power, is the electric fan. Throughout the world the American-made electric fan is a life-saver during hot weather, a temper-tamer, a peace maker. It has cut out half the fret of summer business and made work possible as a pleasure where before it was grinding toil. Electric fan week is entitled to all the promotion it can get, for the fan is a benefit to the human race, in factory, sweatshop, office, store and home.

The electric fan is not the natural evolution of one of man's oldest devices. There is absolutely nothing new about the fan. So far back as the records of man were kept, even if the most fragmentary way, fans have been in use to supply artificially a cooling breeze during hot weather.

The first fan was probably a palm leaf, cut with a stone knife to the proper shape. Palm leaf fans are with us yet, and will be for a long time. If there is anything in modern use of greater antiquity than the palm leaf fan, no one knows what it is. The oldest Egyptian picture writings show these fans in actual use thousands of years ago.

The fan has come down to us in a variety of forms. It has served its purpose as an ornamental piece of dress, a dainty thing of ivory, rare feathers and precious stones. It has passed through various stages of development from the huge peacock fans of the Egyptians to the India ceiling fan, or "punjab," requiring a slave or attendant to operate it. The latest development, and the most wonderful of all, is the modern electric fan, or the hot weather comforter. The electric fan is easily the best. A bit of shade brings a little relief from the heat of the July sun; a bit of coolness properly applied to certain hot weather beverages helps to keep the sufferer a few degrees below a dangerous temperature; but it is the little electric fan which brings the cool breezes of the hills into the hottest apartment, into the sweltering city flat or the hot office. No matter how hot the sun shines, no matter how much humidity in the air, no matter how stifling and stagnant the atmosphere—the touch of a button and the cooling breeze are at the command of anyone in any quantity or velocity desired.

Electricity is the magician which holds captive the rays of the sun and lets them out after nightfall to drive away the somber shades of night; it takes the heat from coal and brings it into the house to cook the food and heat the rooms; it takes the power from the falling water and carries it miles and miles to turn the wheels of industry and transportation. And, not content with all these wonders, electricity has stuffed into its wonder bag the four winds and releases them at demand.

The electric fan was an American invention which has been developed within the last few years until millions of fans are in use throughout the world. Back in the early eighties an electrical engineer of New York was experimenting with a small electric motor. In the course of his experiments he conceived the idea that steamboats might be run with electricity if the propellers could be directly connected to high-speed electric motors, doing away with all the gears then in use in steam propulsion. With this idea in mind he had a small screw-propeller constructed and fastened to the armature shaft of his small motor. To his surprise the experiment resulted in a fine breeze of cooling air which more than delighted the experimenter, for the day was decidedly hot. It is needless to add that the experiments with screw-propellers ended eight there and the engineer took up the study of the electric fan with the result that he soon perfected the device until it was a commercial success.

At that time all the fans were built by batteries. Later they were connected with the series arc lighting circuits but this was found to be as dangerous as it was unsatisfactory. Little
